

Kitsune

The wind was howling, and the moon was setting. The sun was rising and the day was beginning, a kitsune was sleeping, but the daylight woke her up. She walked out of the cave when the sun rays touched her and the wind blew in her face.

She saw nature everywhere like flowers, trees, and little ponds, she kept on walking looking for food. It started to rain as dark clouds started to show, a rain drop fell on her as the storm started to only sprinkle. She walked by a group of kitsune's playing together, like catching birds or playing games while other kitsunes were sleeping together.

It was still sprinkling when the kitsune found a cave to rest in. It was getting dark and she fell asleep. The next day she woke up and the sun was making the cave more clear to see, there, was crystals everywhere and the kitsune saw how the crystals were different colors, and shapes it amazed her of the beauty. As she walked out of the cave, it was still sprinkling there was mud and puddles and the sun was almost showing.

Soon after the kitsune kept walking and passed a tiny park, it was abandoned but, there was more kitsunes playing there, the kitsune wanted to play, so she went over and played, it was fun and she made new friends, she felt happy.

She saw some berries and ate them they were sweet but a little sour. Soon after the kitsune started to go home, she passed all of the places she saw and stopped to rest in the crystal cave again, now the rain was gone but the ground was still wet.

She passed the pond again and the nature to. She stepped in a puddle and looked down, she saw her reflection, and then realized that the nature, her friends, the park, the crystals, they all made her happy, and those were the things she belonged to, she just never realized it before.